

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

duced. Held, that the letters are admissible. Fayette Liquor Co. v. Jones, 83 S. E. 726 (W. Va.).

Letters not received in due course of post in reply to previous communications must be authenticated in some other way, usually by proof that they are in the handwriting of the alleged sender, or of some one authorized by him. Lingg v. State, 28 Ind. App. 248, 61 N. E. 696; Sweeney v. Ten Mile Oil & Gas Co., 130 Pa. St. 193, 18 Atl. 612. But it has been stated that the contents of a letter cannot be used to prove its genuineness. Freeman v. Brewster, 93 Ga. 648, 21 S. E. 165. Exceptions have been made to this rule, however, in cases where the ordinary methods of authentication are unavailable. In re Deep River National Bank, 73 Conn. 341, 47 Atl. 675; Hollister Bros. v. Bluthenthal, 9 Ga. App. 171, 70 S. E. 970. See 3 WIGMORE, EVIDENCE, § 2148. Thus, in an early case, a letter sent by an illiterate was held to be authenticated by its contents. Singleton v. Bremer, Harp. (S. C.) 201, 209. Similarly, an unsigned typewritten letter was admitted, because it related to matters peculiarly within the knowledge of the alleged sender. Commonwealth v. Drum, 42 Pa. Super. Ct. 156. So, too, another court held that a letter was sufficiently authenticated by its reference to subjects previously discussed between the sender and the addressee. People v. Adams, 162 Mich. 371, 385, 127 N. W. 354, 360. Under circumstances where authentication by handwriting is impossible, the doctrine of these cases seems necessary and just, but it is properly restricted to cases where the internal evidence strongly negatives the possibility of fraud.

INFANTS — TORTS — LIABILITY FOR TORT ARISING IN CONNECTION WITH CONTRACT. — The defendant, an infant, hired a motor-car of the plaintiff to ride to a certain destination. During an intentional deviation, the car was injured without negligence on the defendant's part. The plaintiff sues in tort for conversion. Held, that he cannot recover. Farwett v. Smethhurst, 31 T. L. R. 85 (K. B. Div.).

The general rule imposing liability on infants for their torts is subject to the ill-defined exception of "torts arising out of contract." Slayton v. Barry, 175 Mass. 513, 56 N. E. 574. Thus, in England an infant is not liable for deceit in inducing a contract. R. Leslie, Ltd., v. Sheill, [1914] 3 K. B. 607. In this country, however, there is vigorous protest against according such immunity. Fitts v. Hall, 9 N. H. 441; Rice v. Boyer, 108 Ind. 472, 9 N. E. 420. Contra, Slayton v. Barry, supra. See WILLISTON, SALES, § 26; 14 HARV. L. REV. 71. So, too, the American authorities, contrary to the principal case, generally hold an infant liable for conversion on the unauthorized use of a chattel bailed. Churchill v. White, 58 Neb. 22, 78 N. W. 369; Freeman v. Boland, 14 R. I. 39; Towne v. Wiley, 23 Vt. 355. Contra, Penrose v. Curren, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 351. In fact, the phrase "tort arising out of contract" is obscurely applied. For instance, it is said that the negligent injury of a bailed article is substantially a breach of an implied promise of careful use, for which the infant cannot be sued merely by changing the form of action. Young v. Muhling, 48 N. Y. App. Div. 617, 63 N. Y. Supp. 181. By this reasoning an intentional injury, being a fortiori a breach of contract, could not sustain an action ex delicto against the infant. But the law is otherwise. Moore v. Eastman, 1 Hun (N. Y.) 578. See Eaton v. Hill, 50 N. H. 235, 240. If it be granted that there is sound policy in holding an infant for his torts, the mere circumstance that he has possession of another's property by virtue of an unenforceable contract should not afford him greater license. The principal case would seem entirely too solicitous of the infant. Cf. Burnard v. Haggis, 14 C. B. N. S. 45.

INSURANCE — RE-INSURANCE — LIABILITY OF RE-INSURER TO INSURED WHO ACCEPTS ASSIGNMENT OF RE-INSURANCE CONTRACT IN SATISFACTION OF HIS CLAIM. — The re-insurer of a suretyship company covenanted to pay the